Chicago's famous RH Love Galleries recently moved to a new showroom on the Magnificent Mile. They knew that finding a mover with experience in proper handling of fine art was crucial, yet they were working on a fairly limited relocation budget. After interviewing several commercial movers and contacting their references, gallery owner Charles Love selected Boyer-Rosene to handle the move.

Boyer-Rosene's experienced staff worked carefully with the gallery to carefully prepare the various art works for transportation to the new gallery. Valuable and heavy sculptures and paintings were carefully crated and packed, and other paintings were pad wrapped and placed in rolling gurneys that were carefully secured in Boyer-Rosene's modern trucks. No damage occurred during the move. Boyer-Rosene has extensive experience with art, having moved the private collections of many private corporate collections, and working with businesses such as Corporate Artworks. Boyer-Rosene also recently completed the move of the ABA Museum.
