Much Shelist Freed Denenberg Ament & Rubenstein, P.C. decided to move to new, high tech space to stay at the forefront of technology, and provide new space for their growth. The move to new offices came after more than 17 years at their previous location, 200 North LaSalle Street. During that period, the firm grew to over 90 attorneys. In addition to new offices, the firm added a new fully integrated communications system that allows attorneys to check e-mail via the telephone, and voicemail via their computers, enhanced knowledge management systems, a state-of-the-art conference center, and other changes.

The firm retained relocation consultant The Carter Group to help determine the needs for the physical relocation, and to assist in selecting a mover. After an exhaustive RFP and proposal period, Boyer-Rosene was chosen to handle the relocation. Many factors worked to Boyer's favor, including it's experience in these buildings, (as well as experience in virtually every major Chicagoland building), a reputation for quality that was vital for the relocation of many custom partner furnishings, as well as crucial building protection issues in the new space. Boyer-Rosene's management reviewed the new space with Much Shelist's facilities staff prior to and again at the conclusion of this demanding move, and the client was very impressed with the excellent, move-in condition of the destination offices.

Boyer-Rosene worked with an IT sub-contractor during the project to prepare all the computer equipment for the move, so that the attorneys and their staffs could be up an running for business as usual at the completion of the move.
